NINETEENTH SUNDAY IN ORDINARY TIME

A Dangerous Word

TOMORROW is a dangerous word. We use it when we leave things undone or half done. It is an excuse for uncompleted work or loose ends needing tying up. Today's parable has a startling metaphor. The Second Coming of Jesus is compared with the breaking and entering of a thief. At an hour you do not expect, the Son of Man will come.

Two thousand years ago, Jesus Christ broke into our world in an astonishing way: a simple carpenter, turned itinerant preacher, living in a little dot on the map – Galilee. Why should we think His Second Coming will be any different? He came urging tender service and forgiveness. No force. No violence. Why should His message be any different the next time? The first coming, the Incarnation was a shock, a surprise, a most unexpected event.

If we fool ourselves into thinking that the "next time" is tomorrow, we weaken our vigilance. Today's gospel advises us that we are foolish if we are not vigilant today. If today, in our compulsive busyness, mindless routine, endless clutter, we neglect to miss the call to service. If today, we write off the needs of someone, our chance for salvation can be lost. Today's parable asks us to reflect on how we would like God to find us. Today. Only fools count on TOMORROW.
